CHANTILLY, Va., Oct. 10, 2007 — Citizant, one of the capitol area's fastest-growing providers of business and technical solutions to civilian and military government organizations, has been awarded a $1 million contract to support enterprise architecture development at the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) within the U.S. Department of Health & Human Services.

Citizant's team of experts will produce and document business process models across the organization that will allow the CMS chief information officer's department to evaluate and validate investment decisions.

"We are honored that CMS has selected Citizant's team to help it better serve 90 million beneficiaries and to achieve a transformed and modernized health care system in the United States," said Alba M. Alemán, president of Citizant. "While government scorecard performance and compliance with the FEA are critical objectives, the end result of all business modernization efforts within the government should be to make life better for the citizens."

Citizant has successfully managed enterprise architecture and business process modeling assignments at the Federal Railroad Administration, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, U.S. Customs and Border Protection, and other federal agencies. Throughout its eight-year history, Citizant has achieved a 100-percent positive past performance record, based in large part on its quality process orientation and dedication to achieving the customer's mission.
