

Citizant Promotes Frank Nigro to Division Director

Leader in government enterprise advances former Northrop Grumman exec to support and grow business at departments of Treasury, Labor and Agriculture

CHANTILLY, Va., May 25, 2010 — Citizant, a fast-growing, leading provider of government enterprise solutions to the federal marketplace, has promoted Frank Nigro to division director, responsible for managing current customers and expanding business opportunities within the departments of Treasury, Labor and Agriculture.

Nigro joined Citizant in 2009 as operations manager, responsible for managing the company's contract with the Department of Labor to provide acquisition support for a proposed enterprise-wide IT system and also leading a USDA contract to provide enterprise architecture support for the geospatial segment. Previously, he was program director for Northrop Grumman Information Systems in Herndon, Va., where he was responsible for the Internal Revenue Service's Total Information Processing Support Services contract.

"We are thrilled to have Frank on our team. He has brought tremendous capability to our capture and delivery organizations, particularly during development of our TIPPS-4 proposals," said Raymond Roberts, CEO of Citizant. "Frank has deep experience managing task orders under large IDIQs. His knowledge and expertise are crucial to our ability to win task orders, deliver successful solutions and manage overall effectiveness of IDIQ programs."

Nigro has more than 30 years of experience in program and project management, including software development, engineering management, system integration and process improvement. In addition to his career with Northrop Grumman Corporation, he previously worked with the Office of the Secretary of the U.S. Army.

"I am excited to be a part of the Citizant team," said Nigro. "This company has a stellar record of efficient and cost-effective project management. I look forward to applying my experience to help Citizant meet its goals and deliver the best possible solutions on time for clients."

Nigro is a certified project management professional. He holds a Bachelor of Civil Engineering from the University of New Hampshire in Durham, N.H., and a Masters in Business Management from Webster University in St. Louis, Mo. Nigro has more than 20 years of experience in the U.S. Army, serving as program manager for information systems and then division chief of system application support services for the Department of the Army.
